

E-LEMON-AIDER AIDS CONSUMERS IN PREVENTING USED CAR FRAUD

(PRWEB) November 29, 1999 -- Tulsa, OK, USA -- Steve Hargis, owner of Radiator Repair Specialists and Auto Service in Coweta, Oklahoma, has produced an instructional video on what to look for in buying a used car after being made aware of the need to avoid being taken advantage of by his customers. Mr Hargis has over 20 years of experience in buying, selling, repairing, and maintaining vehicles. "How to Purchase a Used Vehicle" is for anyone, especially for the person who knows little or nothing about the internal functioning of a vehicle's systems.

The video demonstrates what to look for, how to test using simple tools and find potential problems that a car dealer might not look for. The information is honest, exact and documented. This information is not available to the average consumer.

A recent survey conducted by the AARP (American Association of Retired Persons), published in USA TODAY, 3/17/99, shows that one in five Americans believe that they have been victims of fraud. Seventy-four percent believe they have received unsatisfactory products or services in the past year. According to the AARP survey, the most common complaints involve auto purchases and repairs, the two major causes of consumer fraud.

The "How to Purchase a Used Vehicle" video arms consumers with more modern vehicle information, allowing them to be better informed and able to negotiate the best price on the vehicle that best serves their needs with the least amount of unexpected repairs.
