With the current economic situation, many motorists believe they simply cannot afford auto insurance. Insurers understand this, and have turned their focus to a consumer-centric approach by allowing free quotes and easy comparison shopping, driving prices down to a more affordable level.

In an effort to save money due to budget constraints, individuals continue to drive uninsured or underinsured. Aside from being illegal, the legitimate risk of becoming personally liable for damages increases the pressure and anxiety for a large group of consumers, yet economic circumstances are usually to blame.

The probability of an accident increases exponentially due to other factors including weather conditions, roads in need of repair, as well as unsafe drivers. As such, caught unprepared, inadequately insured motorists run a greater risk of becoming personally liable in the event of an accident.
