

Online ATV Safety Course Now Available at ATVCourse.com

Fresh Air Educators, Inc - leader in online outdoor education - is announcing a new Internet-based course for ATV safety education students. ATVCourse.com includes a fully narrated, interactive online study guide, as well as visual ATV safety certification exams in several states.

(Vocus/PRWEB) January 05, 2011 -- ATV safety education has been increasing across the United States and hands-on training classes are having trouble keeping up with student demand. As a result, more and more state ATV safety agencies and organizations are adopting online education programs to teach and certify riders. The new Online ATV Safety Course is professionally narrated, interactive and features visual aids in every exam question.

For the past 10 years, Fresh Air educators has been perfecting boat license courses as well as hunter safety courses, and is now focusing on other outdoor activities that require an education certificate or license. ATV safety education is a niche that is expecting continued growth over the next few years, and Fresh Air is eager to provide this service to state agencies and their constituents.

"We're very excited to launch this new ATV Course," says Kerry Moher, VP at Fresh Air Educators, "We've been working with a number of industry experts and state coordinators for a long time now and we're thrilled with the results. We can't wait for the 2011 riding season!" The online course is currently available in Utah and New Mexico, with numerous additional state agencies currently going through the approval process.

In addition to ensuring up-to-date and powerful course content, the Fresh Air team has also created hundreds of detailed illustrations and over 30 interactive animations in order to make the course more interactive and engaging for students.

"If people are going to spend a few hours studying the course online, they don't want to stare at text the entire time. All of our courses are professionally narrated, and you'll never see a page of content that doesn't contain at least one image or interactive exercise that explains the content in more detail." Adds Moher, "Our students do exceptionally well in all our online courses, and that's due to the different teaching methods we use throughout. Whether you're a visual, auditory or hands-on learner, the course has something to offer you."

At the end of the 5-chapter ATV course (which includes practice quizzes after each chapter) students will complete a 60-question multiple-choice ATV Safety Certification Exam, in order to receive the ATV education certificate or ATV license, depending on the state. Every exam question in the chapter quizzes as well as the certification exam is illustrated for further clarification.

The success rate in Fresh Air's online courses is very high, with an average overall final exam score of 90%, and a pass rate of 95%. Moher expects this trend to continue into the online ATV course. "After taking our course, students are very prepared for the final exam and the stats prove that. And in the end, over 98% of all our online students would recommend our courses to others who require certification. What more can we say?!"

The fee for the online ATV safety course is $29.95, paid after the student has completed Chapter 1. This fee includes unlimited attempts at the ATV certification exam, and Fresh Air offers a 100% satisfaction guarantee on all their courses.
