World Patent Marketing Reviews A New Car Accessory Invention. Will Camera Alarm Be the Next World Patent Marketing Low Cost Success Story?

Miami, FL (PRWEB) December 06, 2016 -- World Patent Marketing, a vertically integrated manufacturer and engineer of patented products, introduces the Camera Alarm, a car accessory invention that will help protect cars in the case of a break-in.

“The automotive accessory industry is worth $40 billion,” says Scott Cooper, CEO and Creative Director of World Patent Marketing. “Accessories are becoming more and more important to consumers. Dealers will be able to increase profits with the right technologies.”

“A car is an extremely valuable possession for anyone and having someone break into your car can be a pretty scary thing,” says Jerry Shapiro, Director of Manufacturing and World Patent Marketing Inventions. “This car accessory invention will allow people to track their car if someone happens to take it.”

The Camera Alarm is a car accessory invention that will stand in the way of intruders. Someone breaking into a car can be a huge hassle. Cars are extremely expensive, necessary, and valuable. Some people put a lot of money into them. Even if the intruder doesn't steal the car, they can steal valuables kept inside the vehicle. This invention is a wireless camera that is mounted on the car's visor. In the event of a break-in, when the alarm goes off, it takes a photo of the person in the car and sends it to the user's phone. The Camera Alarm also has a GPS functionality in order to help track the car if the intruder drives off with it. It even comes with a safety feature to protect the owner in case the car is broken in while they are still inside. The Camera Alarm will automatically take a picture of the assailant and send it to the local authorities to show that the car owner is being attacked and that they need to send help.

“Never worry about your car again with the Camera Alarm,” says inventor Michael S. “Simply install this in your car and the thief will think twice about breaking in.”

The Camera Alarm is a car accessory invention that helps the user find their car and the culprit in the case of a break-in. It is a camera and GPS system that photographs the intruder and allows the user to track their car's location.
