

Songster Creates Timely Every Truck Lover's Dream

Cyril May and Jack McDonald Release New Song: Holocaust Harry's Hotpipe

Long Beach, CA (PRWEB) April 25, 2004 - Truck song of truck songs, "Holocaust Harry's Hotpipe". The tune ignores the gas crunch and wallows in the notion of big powerful monsters beyond whatever the non-custom rigs can do.

"Well I used to drive those regular trucks before I built this rig

Back in the days when I was broke

Before I made it big

When I sucked dust behind Volvos

And ate it behind vans

Men with Fords and GMCs and even panel vans

When 30,000 kilos was considered a big load

Back in the days when 18 wheelers were the King Kongs of the road well that's when I won the Lotto, folks and achieved my hearts desire, and I built this big jet powered truck and put her out for hire.

In the song, the man talks about 2,000 horse power, 3 transmissions and a computerized gear shift to manage it all. It's funny and bouncy and probably a secret dream of every trucker.

A down to earth singer and songwriter, Cyril May and his musical cohort Jack McDonald make having a supertruck like described in this song sound like a really nifty idea.

"Holocaust Harry's Hotpipe" is only one of the great songs on Cyril May and Jack McDonald's CD "Off

The Beaten Track". Listen to samples of their tunes on the web site: www.cyrilmay.com. For more information contact via postal mail at 266 Orizaba, Long Beach, CA 90803; 562/433-0734 or email at divingds@juno.com
