(PRWEB) January 16, 2013 -- In their most recent blog post Complete Auto Loans “CAL” provides some insight into choosing which lending process to go with when seeking an auto loan. With so many choices available to car shoppers it can be difficult to choose which auto lender will provide the highest quality services for a good or bad credit loan. In every case there’s a definite process that car shoppers can follow to get the best results out of their loan.

First, dealerships provide a subprime or bad credit loans all the time. To get a loan one will need to follow about 10 steps that can take more than a day before a loan is acquired. A consumer will need to go to the dealership, find the car they like, haggle on the price, settle on a deal, go to the office, finalize all paperwork for financing, allow the dealer to do a credit check, haggle over interest rates for the loan, and write out a down payment for the vehicle purchase. Second, there are loans available through a local bank. The local bank’s process is a lot less painful but the possibility of getting a bad credit auto loan is much less likely through a bank. One will need to choose their bank or credit union, visit the branch, fill out paperwork for the loan, send in their paperwork, wait for the bank, the bank will check one’s credit, after approval they will be required to sign off on the loan. If approval is not given then a car shopper will need to find a local dealer who supplies loans for bad credit.

Finally, there’s an online option which for bad credit auto loans which does prove to be the easiest. Getting a loan online requires that one visit the proper lending site, click on the get approved button, fill out the form, send out the application, and then wait for approval in about 1 minute.

Getting a loan online is the easiest option for car shoppers. It does not matter what type of credit a consumer has. The online lending system at CAL can get everyone approved for a loan. One only needs to apply. CAL has helped thousands of consumers get approved for loan through their unique lending system. Their online platform can get car shoppers approved in as little as 60 seconds. Get approved for a car loan here
