

Author Sara Rockford’s new book “Para-What?” is a collection of stories inspired by her poignant and comical adventures riding on the Rockford Paratransit bus system

Recent release “Para-What?” from Page Publishing author Sara Rockford is a compilation of entertaining tales drawn from the experiences of the passengers, drivers, and personnel of the Illinois-based Rockford Mass Transit Paratransit service.

NEW YORK (PRWEB) October 16, 2019 -- Sara Rockford, a Chicago native and entrepreneur who was diagnosed with vascular retinopathy in 2005 and established her own graphic design business firm in 2016, has completed her new book “Para-What?": a poignant and sometimes hilarious collection of mostly-true tales starring some unforgettable characters.

Sara writes, “You feel more than just bumps in the road while riding public transportation in the city of Rockford, Illinois—a sidewalk-less, backwater city where you can find growing corn fields next to popular family restaurants. Secrets are exposed, character flaws are uncovered, and even romance and lust flourish from just a mere schedule of a ride on a paratransit bus.

Will you be able to figure out which driver is in the hot seat for each mini story? And will you be able to determine whether or not the story is based on facts or based totally on the imagination of the author? Each story, heart-wrenching or comical, will pull at your heartstrings and leave you crying with laughter. Take a closer look at the Rockford Mass Transit District. You will be surprised.”

Published by New York City-based Page Publishing, Sara Rockford’s lighthearted book is an entertaining day in the life of the Rockland Paratransit community.

Readers who wish to experience this engaging work can purchase “Para-What?” at bookstores everywhere, or online at the Apple iTunes store, Amazon, Google Play, or Barnes and Noble.
