Insurance companies recommend drivers to use online car insurance quotes, compare prices and after that, purchase coverage online. Making online transactions is time-effective and more convenient for both the buyer and the insurance company. For a faster and easier shopping experience, a person should follow the next tips:

- Keep the car and the current coverage documents nearby. In order to purchase car insurance, clients must provide first a series of information regarding driving history, car details, and personal info. While some details are easy to fill in, for some info, like the car's exact model, body type, number of cylinders or VIN number, some documents will be really useful.
- Visit the state's Department of Insurance website for a basic view of the local insurance market. Also, each state has different legislation regarding auto insurance. The local Department of Insurance provides the necessary info. Drivers should know more about the minimum state requirement, laws involving totaled or stolen cars, usage of credit score in premium's determination and so on.
- Compare car insurance quotes from multiple websites. It is recommended to get as many quotes as possible before buying coverage. To get in touch with multiple insurance companies selling in a particular area, use a brokerage website. The user will get filtered results that match his selections and vehicle, then he can sort them by price.
- Use correct info when requesting quotes or purchasing coverage. A client's honesty is crucial for any insurance company. Naturally, they will check if the info provided online matches with the real data. Hiding recent traffic violations is no use since the insurance companies will investigate with authorities. Lying or hiding information is considered fraud and it is punishable by law.
- Simulate various coverage options. Insurance websites allow customers to fully customize their coverage options. They can select coverage limits, deductibles, apply for various offers (for example apply to Snapshot monitoring programs) and even customize when to pay the premiums and how. Online tools then will calculate the price and will display it. Simulating various coverage options will help drivers design the coverage they want,
