Customers can take advantage of some at-home services to continue practicing social distancing

MERIDIAN, Miss. (PRWEB) March 31, 2020 -- For the current model year, the Honda Civic and Honda Civic Hatchback continue each version's history of success in the respective automotive industry class. The 2020 Honda Civic Sedan and 2020 Honda Civic Hatchback are each available in five trim grades. Meridian Honda customers interested in the sedan model can choose among LX, Sport, EX, EX-L and Touring models. The hatchback variant offers a quintet of trim grades of its own, LX, Sport, EX, EX-L and Sport Touring. Each of these vehicle options is not only available at the Meridian Honda showroom, but also offers distinct advantages over its competition in several important areas.

The standard powertrain equipped under the hood of the 2020 Civic LX will use a naturally aspirated 2.0-liter, four-cylinder engine mated to a six-speed manual transmission that will make 158 horsepower and 139 pound-feet of torque. Buyers choosing the EX, EX-L and Touring models will use a turbocharged four-cylinder engine that can make up to 174 when its equipped with a continually variable transmission. One of the top competitors for the 2020 Civic sedan will only have a 1.6-liter, four-cylinder engine available, making 120 horsepower.

Buyers who might need more interior space can take a closer look at the 2020 Honda Civic Hatchback. This version of the 2020 Civic offers better performance output than its sedan cousin as well as the hatchback model of the previously mentioned Civic competitor. Additionally, the 2020 Civic Hatchback LX can make up to 46.2 cubic-feet of cargo volume available. That is nearly 50 percent more cargo volume than its rival from another automaker.
