(PRWEB) October 10, 2004 -- Adam Wilcox is the new 2004 British GT Cup Champion after a successful outing at Brands Hatch last weekend the DRM Racing Ferrari.

Adam and his co-driver Ni Amorim from Portugal needed to score in only one of the two races at the circuit a 5th place or higher to secure the title if their main rivals tech9 won both races.

In race 1 Adam qualified the car in 3rd place, and started the hour long race, after 30 minutes he had worked his way into 2nd place and the only other drivers capable of stopping him taking the title were way down the order in 9th and by now un-able to win the race, so in theory Adam and Ni were already the 2004 driver champions... after 34 minutes he pitted and handed the car over to Ni to complete the remainder of the race and he finally come home in 4th place, securing the 2004 British GT Championship title for the DRM Racing team drivers.

Race 2 saw Ni Amorim start the heavy rain affected race having earlier qualified 6th, with now ex-rival Tech9 in their Porsche GT3 on pole position for the race, Ni drove for little over 23 minutes and then came into pit to change over to Adam under a safety car to remove a damaged car from the circuit, Adam rejoined in 4th place, and quickly set about catching and passing the 2 cars ahead into 2nd place, another accident on the what was now a very wet and dangerous circuit saw another safety car deployed and the Tech9 Porsche that was leading by now only seconds gained a one lap advantage and after the safety car was called in Adam could do no more than a 2nd place.
