

CHP's Spike Helmick Viciously Attacked

California Highway Patrol Commissioner Spike Helmick has been viciously attacked.

(PRWEB) October 13, 2004 -- CHP Commissioner Spike Helmick, who was forced to resign his post amid fraud accusations, was viciously attacked monday morning.

Former Commissioner Helmick was shown the door by Governor Schwarzenegger, after attempting to defraud the State of California by seeking a disability pension he was not entitled to through worker's compensation.

Helmick filed a claim for falling out of his chair at work, and has since rescinded the claim.

Outraged Californians viciously attacked Helmick monday morning ranting threats and calling the former commissioner 'a vile pig'.

'Chief's Disease' as it is known within the CHP has become rampant with 55 of the top 65 officers currently under investigation for worker's compensation fraud.

Californians are not pleased with the news, and have been taking the law into their own hands.

Helmick is in a severe state of shock from the incident, but is expected to recover. Helmick faces up to 25 years in prison for attempting to defraud the State of California.
