(PRWEB) December 25, 2004 -- PLUSS Corporation has met market challenges for improved technology and has surpassed them by adding more security and functionality than any provider in the industry. PLUSS Corporation challenges other industry service providers to improve their functionality and security to become a minimum of GLBA compliance.

Kenny Nau Director of Sales, PLUSS Corporation said, "Just recently we have had calls from several clients that have had a breach of security and data. One customer had his customer database copied by an employee leaving the company to start his own business. Another spent thousands of dollars to have data restored after hackers broke into his system and wreaked havoc. Now add that to down time from this event and the dollars add up very quickly. These types of security violations are extremely costly and only further reinforce the need for staunch security for their business management systems."

With today's information security concerns, we have found there is a lack of available resources for those in the heavy-duty trucking and automotive industries. As pointed out in the December issue of Successful Dealer, the GLBA is becoming a growing concern. PLUSS Corporation is offering a free 1-day GLBA educational seminar February 18th 2005 for those in the heavy-duty trucking and automotive market segments. Due to limited seating, an RSVP must be received by January 21st 2005 and include the amount of people scheduled to attend. This will help become familiar with the Gramm-Leach-Bliley Act of 1999 and how to become compliant from a business standpoint. You can find more information about the GLBA on the Federal Trade Commission's website at www.ftc.gov.

This seminar is RSVP only and the speakers will include:

- Jeremy Martin CISSP, ISSMP, ISSAP, CEI, CEH, CCNA, Network+, A+
Sr. Information Security Consultant

Covering: Information Security compliance

- Judy Peterson

Accounting Specialist

Covering: Accounting Best practices
