All states, except New Hampshire, require drivers to obtain car insurance. For many drivers, car insurance can be an expensive necessity. Luckily, there are plenty of methods and discounts provided by insurers that can help any driver save money on car insurance.

The following methods can help drivers pay lower insurance premiums:

- Park the car in a safe place. One of the factors that can affect the cost of car insurance is the place where a car is parked overnight. Drivers who park their vehicles in a safe location where they can monitor it easily, like a garage, will pay lower car insurance premiums. Cars kept in a garage are less likely to be stolen and they are protected against vandalism and the damaging effects of severe weather events.
- Maintain a good credit score or try to improve it. Insurance companies consider that policyholders that have a good credit score will pay their insurance bills on time and they are less likely to file insurance claims. There are several ways to improve a credit score. Paying the bills on time and not gathering debt will help drivers have a better credit score.
- Graduate a defensive driving course. Besides helping drivers to improve their driving skills, defensive driving courses can also help them save money on car insurance. Drivers who manage to graduate an approved defensive driving course will be rewarded with a consistent discount that is between 10% to 15%.
- Collaborate with a good and competent insurance agent. Having a good professional relationship with an insurance agent has multiple benefits. Good insurance agents will keep drivers updated with information regarding the latest insurance changes, insurance offers, and discounts. Furthermore, insurance agents can help drivers when they need to file a claim.
- Shop around and compare online quotes. Policyholders should check the insurance market at least two times per year. Brokerage websites are ideal for drivers who want to easily obtain multiple car insurance quotes from different insurance carriers. Online quotes can help drivers obtain the insurance policies they need.
