

TruckNet Redesigns "Dynamic" Web Site

"Everything in One Place" is the motto of TruckNet. The redesign of the web site makes the site even more dynamic and resourceful for the trucking industry.

(PRWEB) April 12, 2002 -- Lebanon MO. - TruckNet (<http://www.truck.net>) has recently redesigned their web-site in order to give drivers, carriers and industry personnel, the most complete trucking resource on the Internet today. TruckNet averages over 6 million hits per month.

TruckNet offers drivers and carriers a teaming partnership with their Trucking Jobs Program. Drivers fill out one application and can either choose to have it go to all carriers subscribed or a selective few. A simple form, a few easy steps and best of all, it's free.

Staying connected on the road is important in today's world, through the free TruckMail Program. Users are able to set up their own personal email mailbox within the TruckNet program.

The redesigned "dynamic" site makes it possible to keep news up to date, press releases of industry concerns available within minutes after being received.

Drivers and family members are able to communicate around the world, free of charge on the world's largest interactive forum, the Driver's RoundTable. Forums from general conversation, legal discussion, medical resources, to private family discussion can be found. Currently, there are over 10,000 registered active members to date.

Founded in 1995, TruckNet offers an array of services serving drivers, clients and the general public. From educational material, up to date news, recruiting and much more. TruckNet lives up to their reputation, "Everything in One Place."
