Tallmadge, OH (PRWEB) December 30, 2014 -- PowerNation TV's Engine Power and Truck Tech teams worked together to transform a ho-hum 1997 Chevy S-10 into a nitrous-belching Pro Street track beast. Summit Racing provided tech advice and parts support, then used that knowledge to assemble these parts combos so fans can see what it takes to build a beastly S-10.

The Engine Power crew yanked the S-10's tired 4.3L V6 engine to make room for the new nitrous-fed 427 Chevy big block. The engine build covered everything from ECU tuning and transmission upgrades, to fuel and exhaust systems.

Once the big block Chevy engine was nestled in its new home, the Truck Tech guys took over to address critical structural and chassis concerns. The team installed a custom one-off roll cage and bolted up a set of track-ready disc brakes. Finally, the PowerNation project was completed with a new set of wheels and tires.
