

Transmission for Sale Inventory Reduced in Sale Price for Buyers at PreownedTransmissions.com

Transmission for sale inventory is now reduced in total price at the Preowned Transmissions company website. These units include the automatic, manual and CVT editions now sold for less.

Madison, WI (PRWEB) January 09, 2014 -- The auto parts industry within North America is split between dealerships, distributors and second hand sellers although some online companies are providing new options for buyers. The Preowned Transmissions company is now reducing the selling price of all of its transmission for sale inventory as a special 2014 incentive at <http://www.preownedtransmissions.com>.

These price changes are designed to affect the CVT, manual and automatic builds that are in stock in used condition. These units feature some of the top assemblies that are created by Ford, General Motors, Dodge, Toyota, Honda and other auto manufacturers. The new pricing for replacement units online is one strategy in use in this new year to attract buyers.

The reduction in price for each of the marketed transmissions online is not expected to affect the attached warranties for each assembly sold in the U.S. The Preowned Transmissions company recently enhanced the amount of parts that are covered under each warranty policy as well as the actual length of time each policy is scheduled to provide protection.

"The new price levels that are now offered to all North American buyers is our way of extending new discounts and incentives for transmission buyers using the Internet as a resource," one source at the PreownedTransmissions.com company said.

The company website is now updated to accurately present all sale pricing and inventory information. This resource is now updated using an automated tool that is linked direct with the company warehouse inventory in the U.S. Each change made to the inventory is now changed automatically online. These changes include all prices and inventory adjustments to alert online buyers.

"Not all prices that consumers find in the second hand industry are created equal due to higher than standard list prices, absence of warranties and exclusion of shipping prices," said the source.

The developed set of tools used by the PreownedTransmissions.com company online to inform all buyers of price and stock information is meant to improve customer relationships. The challenges that are sometimes experienced by buyers with locating transmission codes and other essentials before units are purchased are now eliminated using these new tools online.
