

RVShark Revitalizes Reviews

RVShark (<http://www.rvshark.com>) has grown its popular collection of online, RVer-written RV park reviews by 14% since the beginning of 2004. One recently published review described one RV park as "a dump that appeared nearly abandoned, with overgrown grass, unkempt bathroom facilities, and doors nearly falling off the hinges."

PALO ALTO, CA (PRWEB) April 18, 2004 --RVShark (<http://www.rvshark.com>) has grown its popular collection of online, RVer-written RV park reviews by 14% since the beginning of 2004. The reviews may be accessed free of charge, at <http://www.rvshark.com>.

One recently published review described one RV park as "a dump that appeared nearly abandoned, with overgrown grass, unkempt bathroom facilities, and doors nearly falling off the hinges." Another new posting called a campground "impeccably clean, with a professional and helpful staff."

Whether scathing or glowing, reviews submitted to RVShark that are deemed sincere are published. RVShark's editorial and submission guidelines are published on its website, at <http://www.rvshark.com/about.htm>.

RVShark now has reviews covering RV parks in 27 U.S. states. The website also covers RV parks in Mexico. Most of RVShark's reviews concern parks located in Florida and Texas.

About RVShark

RVShark (<http://www.rvshark.com>), the online recreational vehicle publication, features raw reviews of RV parks based on real RVer's experiences. Launched in August 2001, RVShark also includes RV for sale listings and an RV parks for sale section. RVShark is available free of charge on the Internet at <http://www.rvshark.com>. RVShark is owned by SharkPage, a privately held company based in Palo Alto, California.

###

Contact Information

Carolyn Doyle

SharkPage

<http://www.rvshark.com>

6508149299

Online Web 2.0 Version

You can read the online version of this press release here.