

Rebuilt Honda Engines Get New Lower Prices at RemanufacturedEnginesforSale.com

Rebuilt Honda engines have received new lower prices at the <http://www.remanufacturedenginesforsale.com/honda/rebuilt-honda-civic-engines> website. This company markdown is part of a JDM testing program to find price points for remanufactured motors that are most appropriate for car owners, dealers and others now purchasing foreign motors for swaps and installs.

Seattle, Washington (PRWEB) January 19, 2013 -- Honda created its Civic and Integra platform more than 20 years ago and many of these vehicles are still in use. From project car builders to average drivers, the B series motors have remained a popular choice for installation. The RemanufacturedEnginesforSale.com company has now lowered its rebuilt Honda engines pricing. This new price drop is specifically created to provide an additional way that buyers of engines can save money with these import motors online. Honda includes the Acura brand in its lineup as the luxury mark of this company. While the focus in production has moved to SUVs, the performance vehicles that were created through the 1990s and into the 2000s remain in use by many car owners. The creation of the VTEC technologies helped the Honda brand to provide entirely new performance specs that domestic automakers during this time could not produce. The new price drop for the JDM motors in stock include both the VTEC series and the non-VTEC editions.

Testing is one of the largest hurdles for sellers of secondary market engines. The distributors that sell blocks and completed motors often do not test the units before sale. Each dealer has its own methods of testing or evaluation purposes upon receipt. Since all of the in stock editions are rebuilt on site, the Remanufactured Engines for Sale company performs dyno testing for all units. It is the calibration that these tests provide that is used to verify the actual quality during operation. These new tests are one extra way that is now used to reassure consumer confidence.

The lowering of the Japanese engine pricing represents one price measure that has taken place recently at this company. The Ford Motor Company lineup that includes cars, trucks and SUVs has been paired with additional incentives that started in the fall of last year. The addition of the Triton 5.4 has helped to provide more buying options for vehicle owners and installers that use domestic motors.
